

Waiting for Gordo, a one-act play by Edward deBuvitz

Because the Earth is blocking the sun, the planet Temron has not experienced its light and warmth for many hundreds of years. The inhabitants live underground but a decision of The High Council is intended to change all that. Two Temron military operatives have been sent to earth to remove that blockage. They plan to bury a target in the desert that a huge laser type weapon on Temron will hit and destroy the earth. Trouble begins when the rental car in which they are traveling breaks down and they have to contact Gordo's Road Service. As they wait for Gordo to arrive the younger alien expresses affection for the plants and animals of Earth. The older officer suspects treason and a confrontation takes place that will determine the future of both Temron and earth. The playwright can be contacted at edebuvitz@gmail.com or by calling 505-298-4658.
